

Rhode Island Public Radio (RIPR) Donor Bill of Rights and Privacy Policy

Philanthropy is voluntary action taken for the common good of our community. The tradition of giving and sharing is central to our quality of life. To assure that your giving is treated with the respect and trust it deserves and that donors and prospective donors have full confidence in the not-for-profit organizations and causes they support, we declare that all donors to Rhode Island Public Radio (RIPR) have the right to:

1. Be kept informed of the organization's mission, the way RIPR uses contributed resources, and its capacity to use gifts for their intended purposes in an effective manner.
2. Know the identity of those serving on the Board of Directors and to expect the Board to exercise prudent judgment in its fiduciary and stewardship duties.
3. Have timely access to the organization's most recent financial statements.
4. Be assured contributions will be used for the purposes for which they are intended.
5. Receive appropriate acknowledgment and recognition.
6. Have confidence that RIPR will not trade, sell, or share donor names or personal information with any other entity nor send mailings to our contributors on behalf of other organizations.
7. Have full confidence that information about giving is handled with respect and confidentiality to the fullest extent provided by law.
8. Expect that all relationships with individuals representing RIPR will be professional in nature.
9. Be aware of whether those seeking gifts for RIPR are volunteers, employees, or hired solicitors.
10. Request to be removed from mailing lists that RIPR may intend to share.
11. Have the freedom to ask questions about gift giving and to receive prompt, truthful, and forthright answers.

This statement was developed by the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, the Association for Healthcare Philanthropy, the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), and the Association of Fundraising Professionals (AFP). RIPR endorses it in its entirety.
